POINTS A SHOTGUN AT THE ARRESTING OFFICER

For the third time within six weeks George Fisher of 244 Seventeenth street is in the custody of the police on a charge of disturbing the peace. The first occasion was on the night of December 15 and the second, the night of January 3. In both instances he had threatened the life of his parents.

Yesterday Fisher again started trouble and his father, Henry Fisher, swore to a complaint for his arrest. A warrant was issued and given to Sergeant T. H. Blackburn of the police department to serve. The officer went to the Fisher residence and was met at the door by the son, who, from a position behind a locked screen door, pointed a shotgun at him and ordered him off the premises.

Sergeant Blackburn did not immediately obey the order, but parleyed with the man and, in the conversation, Fisher said his father had not treated him right in a property deal at Farr West, and that, if his parents would sign an agreement to pay him $900, he would leave the country, but if they did not, he would "get them." Finding he could not persuade the man to change his attitude, the sergeant returned to the police station and later in the afternoon Chief of Police T. E. Browning, Detectives Burk and Hobson and Patrolmen Marlin and Jensen accompanied him again to the Fisher residence. They were unable to persuade Fisher to change his warlike attitude and finally the two patrolmen were left to guard the house.

About 10 p. m. Patrolman Jensen worked up to a point near the house where he could engage Fisher in conversation and Patrolman Marlin followed him up. The belligerent was finally coaxed to come out of the house and, while Jensen was talking to him, Chief Browning again arrived on the scene and shortly afterward, Fisher was persuaded to accompany the officers to the police station.

A local branch of the National Union of General Workers, an English organization, has been formed at Athlone, Ireland.

Clydebank (Scotland) Town Council is to make a revision of the employees' war bonus system on account of the ever-increasing cost of living.
